a vote of the City Council, passed 11th April, 1836, authority was given to erect an Iron Fence around the Common, thority was given to erect an Iron Fence around the Common, on Beacon, Park, Tremont, and a part of Boylsten streets, provided the sum of fifteen thousand dollars should be obtained by subscription. This sum was secured, and the work was accordingly done. On the 5th Sept. an order was passed, making a further appropriation for completing the iron fence, and the improvements around the Common, including the Burying Ground. This has also been done. The whole length of the fence around the Common, including the principal entrances and twenty-two epenings for foot passengers, is 5930 feet, or one mile and one eighth. In carrying on these improvements, it seemed to be necessary for the public safety and convenience, that Boylston street should be widened; by

To allow of this improvement, it was necessary to remove about for four box, with a view to ascertain the practicability of effecting exchanges. Before these were finished, a number of the owners of tombs in the contemplated line of the owners of tombs in the contemplated line of the server, of seated to exchange. opinion, by the general voice of approvate opinions of lowed their decision, as well as by the recorded opinions of the City Authorities in former years.

The cost of the erection of the iron fence on all the sides of the Common, the sixty tombs and the other improvements, including the side-walks on Boylston, Tremont, Park and Beacon streets, the Mall and the widening of Boylston st, together with some unforeseen charges, have exhausted the appropriation made in September, and rendered necessary a further sum of fitteen theusand dollars to complete the payment of this whole work. With this sum it is believed every bill may be paid. The private subscription amounts to more than seventeen thousand dollars—besides a considerable sum towards the cost of an iron fence around the burial ground, and thus exceeds the sum required by the terms of the vote of the City Council. Should the appropriation now suggested be made, the whole expenditure for these improvements, including the sum subscribed by individuals, will amount to $35,000. With these views it is recommended that an order be passed, appropriating the sum of $15,000 for the purpose.

2. The best medicine, or remedy for a common cold, is the adoption of the "Graham System" for a few days, until, at least, all its febrile symptoms have departed. Those persons who eat animal food during the first stages of a common cold are greater fools than those who abstain from it all the year round-since the former run the risk of losing their lives by their folly, while the latter run the risk, only, of loosing their strength. According to the Arab prophecies yet preserved in the office of the Inquisition at Granada, and to the manuscript found in a cave of Castares, in the Algruxarra mountains it will be one of the first cities retaken by the Mahometans, Spain. These wild reveries were translated by Alonzo de Castillo, interpreter of the holy office; but he remarks, that the language is, perhaps, purposely so involved, that the sense is not always clear; and the Arabic is so equivocal a tongue, that a long or a short vowel often changes the meaning of a phrase. The Turks, as these prophecies say, will, at a certain time, march an army and take Rome, and afterwards all Spain; and a flaming comet shall be the signal for the commencement of this conquest. The prophecy of Tauca al Hamema, or the dove's breast, informs us, ' that succour shall arrive to Islam when the year begins on a Saturday, and a cloud of birds shall appear, among which, two shall be the angels Gabriel and Michael. Then, also, shall the whole world profess the faith of Mahomet. The moon shall be seen to descend into the garden of Tuhema, after the sun shall have risen, divided into halves, and prophets shall appear; and a king, the son of a faultless king, shall take the Alhambra, and, issuing thence, vanquish other provinces and kingdoms. Then, shall be glory to the Moors. Then, too, shall this monarch obtain possession of Seville, and, at the first sally, of Antequera, climbing over and destroying its walls. Christians, and a brutal old Antichrist will sow at midday, and reap at vespers, and will plant trees with his right-hand, while he plucks their fruits with his left.' A part of this prophecy may not be uninteresting to the English reader; for, it declares that, 'The children of those who adore only one God shall possess Gibraltar in the tenth generation; and what God has revealed, fails not, nor can be avoided. Amen."

For the Boston Morning Post. Who is the object of their adoration? Our songs of praise must have something of tune, of melody, of design; something more than the mere ingenuity of harmonical construction. But there are continual changes taking place in music and with musicians. These differences resemble those which often occur in the Church: in fact they are Church concerns. One says-"Lohere," and another,-"Lo there," One is for Paul, another for Apollos, another for Cephas. The tenure of office to a quarester, as our grandm thers were wont to call it, is very precarious. A mere trifle will sometimes topple the highest star singer from the zenith of his glory. We recollect once to have heard that a leader was dismissed from his station, because he sat down in prayer time; and two very clever performers were turned away for spitting in the organ loft. BOSTON PRORNING POST.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 1837.

Mr Calhoun is now one of the understood champions of a surplus revenue, and its distribution among the States. It is scarcely worth while, perhaps, to attempt to convict of inconsistency, a gentleman who has taken so many different sides of great political questions. It may amuse our readers, however, to see what he thought of a surplus revenue, and a distribution among the States, in the year 1831. He then, it will be recollected, had a quarrel with President Jackson, and made a sort of appeal to the people of the United States, in a printed address. In that paper is to be found the following strongly expressed paragraph:-

"The honest and obvious course i , to prevent the accumulation of the surplus in the Treasury, by a timely and judicious reduction of the imposts; and thereby to leave the money in the pockets of those who made it, and from whom it cannot be honestly nor constitutionally taken, unless required by the fair and legitimate wants of the government. If, neglecting a disposition so obvious and just, the government should attempt to keep up the present high duties, when the money was no longer wanted, or to dispose of this immense surplus by enlarging the old, or devising new, scheme- of appropriations, or finding that to be impossible, it should adopt the most dangerous, unconstitutional, and absurd project ever devised by any government, of dividing the surplus among the States, (a project which, if carried into execution, could not fail to create an antagonist interest between the States and general Government, on all questions of appropriations, which would certainly end in reducing the latter to a mere office of collection and distribution,) either of these modes would be considered by the section suffering under the present high duties, as a fixed determination to perpetuate for ever what it considers the present unequal, unconstitutional, and oppressive burthen; and from that moment, it would cease to look to the general government for relief."

Foreign Correspondence of the Boston Morning Post. Oxford-Blenheim Estate-English Scenery-American Forests-University of Oxford.

I have progressed thus far on my way to "Town," as Englishmen here say of the metropolis of the world, which we Yankees would not think of dignifying by a less imposing appellation than that of "City!" But before attempting, (for I feel it can only be an attempt, and an abortive one, too,) to convey to your mind some idea of this magnificent city, and of the feelings of astonished admiration with which I surveyed, for the first time, its endless succession of venerable and imposing edifices, I will retrace rapidly the route by which I arrived here. I do not purpose, as you will perceive, to weary you with details belonging more properly to a Guide Book, than appropriate to the columns of a newspaper, intended for general amusement, with some interminglings of instruction. The omission of such details in the former, could

The road I took passed through Burton, celebrated for its ale; Litchfield; Birmingham, renowned for its numerous and extensive manufacturing establishments; Stratford, on Avon, distinguished, (as the inscription on the house in which he was born declares,) as being the birthplace of "the immortal William Shakespeare;" and Woodstock, noted for its gloves. As we approached Oxat the moment when they return to re-possess themselves of ford, the country which had been but little diversified, began to assume a more undulating and interesting character. We passed many fine estates belonging to the nobility and gentry, in whose parks considerable numbers of deer were to be seen, quietly and fearlessly grazing. Leaving the town of Woodstock, we drove past the princely estate of Blenheim, belonging to the Duke of Marlborough, where I observed, for the first time in England, large and venerable trees, for which the grounds are celebrated. There is no feature of European scenery which so forcibly and so disagreeably strikes the eye of an American traveller, as the absence of the noble forests his eye has been accustomed to contemplate in his own country; without, however, there, fully appreciating their intrinsic beauties, or their importance to the harmony of the landscape, of which they form apart. This defect in English scenery has been diminishing since the discovery and the increasing use of coal for fuel; so that some centuries hence, the traveller will not have to lament over the bareness of the landscape, now presenting only at long intervals a few clumps of what deserves to be called trees. But on the Continent, where no such inexhaustable store-houses of fuel have been provided by the bountiful Creator-or if provided, discarded by man-the few shapeless trunks which are spared for the sake of the branches, which the growth of several years affords, and which bound up in fagots, form their chief resources, positively disfigure the scenery. Let us take warning by the example of our predecessors and not thoughtlessly, nor without sufficient reasons, prostrate the majestic forests of our country. Let man, if he will, raze to their foundations the palaces he may have built; for a few short years will suffice to raise them up again in more than their former glory; but let him pause and solemnly reflect before he lays his axe to the root of the noble tree, which has withstood the storms of a thousand winters; for it is God only who can restore it to life and beauty.

I never, I believe, formed so erroneous an idea of any place or thing, as I had of Oxford, and especially of its University. Taking our own Universities as a sort of starting point, by which to guide me in drawing the sketch of it, which my imagination had conceived, I thought I had made sufficient allowances in favor of the former. I expected to find the University of Oxford, one grand, magnificent pile of buildings; or perhaps, a number of such buildings; but I was not prepard to find it a City! -an extensive city of most venerable, grand and imposing palaces, and edifices. Yet such I did find it .- Nor as is usually'the case, was my surprise and admiration diminished by more extensive examination. On the contrary, at every step my wonder and my delight increased, till I was literally lost in astonishment, at the almost endless succession of beautiful courts and magnificent edifices. From the street I would sometimes enter the court, of what appeared to be a detached quadrangle; but progressing on, court would be found to succeed court; pile after pile, success sively to present itself to view, till the idea would begin to impress itself on the mind, that there was no end to be found. A passage way would present itself by which the street might be expected to be gained; but it would be found to open upon a succession of courts and edifices, as intermingled as the last; -and yet the stranger passing through the street which I had left, would not dream of being in close proximity to such piles of venerable and imposing buildings. If I had the ability, I could not of course in the compass of a letter, describe to you these Halls and Colleges. but no idea can be formed of their venerable and classic of the Colleges are beautifully laid out in shady walks. Mail:-Those of Magdalen College deserve particularly to be mentioned, especially the retired avenue called "Addison's Walk," which seems, by its quiet and classic appearance, to invite the student to reflection and study. The ous handsome dressy young men, in their loose robes and square crowned caps who fill the streets, give a very gay and peculiar appearance to the city. The station which each occupies in the University may be known by his dress; thus officers may be distinguished from students, and from each other; and thus the Dependent and the Independent students are distinguished. The Ind pendent members are divided into Noblemen, who are Peers or sons of Peers; Gentlemen Commoners, who are young men of family and fortune and who are educated at their own expense; and Commoners who are young men residing at the University at their own expense. The Dependent Scholars are those "on the foundation," as it is called, or in other words, who are supported by their respective Colleges. Every member of the University and every person who enjoys the privileges of that body, must be matriculated. Not even the Barber or Tonsor, who is one of the servants of the College, is exempt from the rule. Before he is permitted to practise his trade in the University, his name most be entered in the Books of the University, before the Vice-Chancellor, when he takes the oath of matriculation, by which he promises to render allegiance to the king, and to observe all the statutes, privileges and costoms of the University. The Tonsor was formerly a personage of considerable importance; so much so, that to this day the Vice Chancellor and Proctors entertain the Fraternity, which is an incorporate company, with an annual supper at their apartments.

I have thus attempted a most imperfect sketch of some of the f atures of this wenderful seat of learning. It would be impossible to do more in the compass of a sheet, and had I the liberty to fill a quire upon it, I should still despair of succeeding in doing more than give you a very faint idea of the Institution itself, or of the feelings with which a slight examination of it inspired me.

Holmes's Poems .- The North American, in a critical notice of Mr Holmes's poems, speaks in high praise of them. From this circumstance we have reason to believe, that the poems of this author are, or are becoming, fashion able. We are very glad to find it so-since he is one of the pure t of all our writers, and worthy of being in good ton. The reviewer remarks-" We have seldom had more genuine enjoyment in the course of our critical labors, | it may, with signal advantage to the trading interest and than in examining this unpretending little book. In these days, we look with some dismay opon a volume of poems, especially if it be a little one. They are apt to exhibit a remarkable economy of the material, and a prodigal use of the wastes and varnishes by which the want of it is supplied. "Things of Eve," and "Things of Morn," with various other creatures of equivocal generation, have figured in such pages, till it seemed as if p etry had lost its connection with manly sentiment and true human nature. The consequence of this imposture is, that poetry has almost dwindled from public observation." These remarks are very good. The reviewer further adds, that Mr Holmes does not write in this mezzotinto style; but reminds us more of the clear strong lines of the ancient engravers. His manner is entirely his own, manly and unaffected; generally easy and playful, and sinking, at times, into a most "humorous sadness." The reviewer concludes by erging him not to relinquish poetry, and hopes to induce him to appear again before the public.

The Life and Works of William Cowper, are also the subject of a very long article in the last North American. We think, on the whole, that since the death of Cowper, he has been made the subject of a great deal more speculation than he was really worthy of. He was a very good, conscientious, re igious hypochondriae, who, like many other women, thought the amount of his sins was unpardonable. We say like many other women-for Cowper, though of the male sex, was feminine in all the characteristics of his mind. He associated only with women and parsons; he was easy of belief, like women-he was nervous and feeble in body, like women-he ate and drank, and wept and trembled like women-and whenever he attempted any kind of writing beyond a woman's powers of mind, he always failed. Cowper's miner poems are, many of them, very beautiful and pathetic. Such pieces were exactly adapted to the weakness of his mind. In regard to his satires and longer poems, they are nothing but dull sermons in rhyme, full of ideas which he probably imbibed from his nurse, while he was in petticoats. Cowper may be worshipped as a saint or a virgin, and we should have no objection against the worship; but we should object against paying him homage as a great poet, when we consider his deficiencies in the nobler and higher powers of the human intellect.

William Shakspeare says-"The man that hath no music in his soul, is fit for murders, treasons, stratagems and spoils."-William Cobbett ridicules this idea, and says, on the other hand-"The man who is not fond of babies; who does not feel his heart softened, when he touches their almost boueless limbs; the man whose heart does not beat truly to this test, is, to say the least, an object of compassion."

A planter near Holly Springs, Miss. will make this season 1800 lbs. of Cotton. Wines at Crockford's .- The London gamblers at Crockford's are regaled with the most exquisite wines of the vineyards of Europe. SIR-I have read with lively emotions your letter of the 14th inst., enclosing a resolution of the Chamber of Comcerce, expressing their opinion that "the Express Mail is admirably calculated to benefit the Commercial interests ried the plan into execution," &c.

In the administration of the Post Office Department, it is my object to extend every possible benefit to every interest of the country, without stopping to consider, to what class, or party, the individuals of which it is composed, may perchance belong; and your testimonial is the more which it might be difficult to withdraw it without creating highly valued, because it has not been sought on the one side, nor given from any personal or party considerations on the other. Steps have already been taken to remove this evil, and in a few days the whole line from New York to Mobile is expected to be as regularly run, as is practicable through so extensive a region of country, not distinguished for good roads, and intersected by many streams (without bridges) which are sometimes impassable. These impediments and the casualties to which such a service from its nature, is liable, will produce occasional irregularities which your chamber and the mercantile community, will have the intelligence to understand, and the justice to ex-

Augusta, Me., Jan. 9th, 1936. Dear Sir: - We have had a hard week down east. It snowed two days and a half, and then it blowed a day " in the awfulest, cruelest and severest manner." The snow fell to the depth of four feet on a level, between this and Brunswick, and the blow made drifts of fifteen or twenty feet high in some places, leaving others as bare as a young received no western newspapers these three days. Yours truly,

Repeal of the Usury Laws -We find among the proceedings of the New York Senate on Saturday, that a bill was reported by Mr Young, from the Committee on this subject, to repeal entirely the Usury Laws in their application to the transactions of individuals, except where the rate of interest is not specified in the contract, in which case the present legal rate is to be deemed and taken as the rate agreed on. In respect to moneyed incorporations, the Committee recommend that the Usury Laws to-day. continue in full force. Mr Lawrence presented a petition for a grant of pecuniary aid to Amherst College, which was referred to a Special Joint Committee, and Messrs Lawrence and Sage were appointed on the part of the Senate.

Mr Cushing's Order, providing for the distribution of the Surplus Revenue among the towns, being called up, Mr Fairbanks, of Boston, moved, that the whole subject should be laid upon the table.

Mr Cushing opposed the motion on the ground, that it was important to come to an early decision of the main question of disposing of the money. He said that the subject was already involved in difficulty by the imperfect of the country, and that the Post Master General deserves a Resolve, passed almost silently through the various legislation of the last session. On the 9th of April last, branches, anticipating the Act of Congress, and authoriz ing the Treasurer to receive the money, and loan it to banks; at 5 per cent., but providing nothing further. Legislative Accuracy .- That portion of the Honorable Senate who were so mighty nice about the municipal returns of votes, must have been very much delighted at an effort of their own to count correctly in the choice of Councillors yesterday. The committee declared the whole number of votes to be 599-necessary for a choice 300, and est on the democratic 238-thus making the whole number 621, instead of 599. Whether the Secretary's name was on the back of the return or not, we can't say. We move, however, that the whole subject be committed to Mr Child of Worcester, and the Suffolk Senatorial delegation.

Remarkable Escape.-The day before yesterday, as the freight train from Boston on the rail road, was approaching this town, it was encountered, just beyond the deep cut, by a man driving his horse and sleigh directly upon the track. The horse was killed, and the sleigh demolishe instantly, but the driver was thrown directly in the centre of the track between the rails so that the engine, tender, in 1836, 1514. EW ENGLAND CROWN GLASS.—The New England Crown Glass Company have recently erected a new farnace and are manufacturing an excellent article. The Crown Glass is thick, pure and of excellent colorness gives it an advantage overall thin glass, which is liable to crack from contraction in cold weather. Its surface not being polished after being blown, retains its enamel, brilliancy and hardness, and is not liable to the objection which applies to Plate Glass, of being easily and permanently bedimmed by

The New England Crown Glass being purer in color than The New England Crown Glass being purer in color than any other Glass, is preferable for Stores, as it does not tinge the rays of light as they pass through it, and therefore white goods particularly appear to advantage; and it is peculiarly useful for Factories, as some minutes of light may be gained morning and evening, in consequence of the absence of color in this glass. The price of second quality is reduced from the rates heretofore asked

Nothing seems to have afforded more general satisfaction and advantage to society, than having the Hygeian Medicine prescribed and prepared by a regular and practical physician, and one who may at all times be consulted or appealed to, and one who may at all times be consulted or appealed to, and one who may at all times be consulted or appealed to, and one who may at all times be consulted or appealed to, and one who is the more appreciated in consequence of disease. This also is the more appreciated in consequence of the number of different medicines which are daily advertised under various pretences in the maine of "Hygeian" and "original Hygeian."

The directions which accompany every package of this Do-The directions which accompany every package of this Domestic Medicine, are exceedingly plain and particular,—the proper dose and man gement of the Pills being carefully given under the head of each disorder separately. Those who keep this medicine by them, especially country families, find that nothing is more economical or better adapted for family use, and being free from mercury or any hurtul property, they may always be resorted to with perfect safety. Neither is it too much to state with strict regard to truth, that thousands are tudebted to this medicine for the preservation of life and ealth.h

The connection which exists between the organs of diges tionand almost all desenses, being the basis of this Domestic Medicine, there is scarcely a disorder incident to human nature in which they are not taken advantageously, but those disorders in which the most remarkable instances of benefit and cures have been experienced are the following:—Bilious disorders, Dyspepsia, affections of the head and nervous complaints, with all those various disorders which originate in hot climates or from costive bowels. Also, Fevers, Inflammation, Gout, Rheumatism, Cutsneous Diseases, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Scrophula, Coughs which threaten Consumption, and especially Gravel, Gleet, and other weaknesses in the Urinary The connection which exists between the organs of diges especially Gravel, Gleet, and other weaknesses in the Urinary and Geintal organs.

This Medicine viso, in a peculiar manner, is adapted to the disorders of the female constitution, both in early and more advanced periods of life.

and the best recommendation which can be offered to those who are unacquainted with it.

Extract of a letter received from a gentleman in Boston, who had suffered severely from indigestion for three years. 'During this time, I suffered very much from mental depression, constant pain in the head and breast, and side, sharp shooting pain over almost the whole system—the food that I ate seemed to pass into my lungs and there remain, giving me great pain as tended with a strong degree of heat. At times, I suffered so much from the pain of indigestion as to be confined to the bed for two or three days. During one of these most severe attacks for two or three days. the relaxed, and debilitated, as an agreeable and speedy restoralive; and considered as a cordial, is essential to the comfort of ladies of fashion, being a preventive against cold, when taken before going out to parties, balls, routs or the play It will enliven the spirits and invigorate the mind and body, and if taken after fatigue, it will with a few hours sleep, take away all languor consequent on broken rest, and give relief from every unpleasant sensation.

It is a most valuable remedy for such diseases as are attended with the following symptoms, namely—a great straitness of the breast, with difficulty of breathing—violent palpitations of the heart, sudden flasees of heat in various parts of the body—at other times a sense of cold, as if water was poured on them—flying pains in the arms and limbs, back and belly, resembling those occasioned by the gravel—the pulse emaciation succeed, and the eyes sink into the head. The virtues of Dr Loveman's Balm of Gileadere demonstrated, in oradicating the worst and most dangerous symptoms of nervous debility, and nothing has tended so much to establish the fame of this medicine, as its certain success in those complaints which strike their roots so deep in the constitution, and are so fatal to the happiness of mankind.

Dr Loveman's Balm of Gilead has risen in repute with every triat of its efficacy. Some, perhaps, unacquainted with the ry triat of its efficacy. Some, perhaps, unacquainted with the ry triat of its efficacy.
